

THE COMMUNITY FOUNDATION OF MIDDLE TENNESSEE

FLOOD RELIEF

The Community Foundation works to address widespread disaster in our community through The Metro Nashville Disaster Response Fund

In partnership with the Office of the Mayor and Davidson County's Office of Emergency Management, The Community Foundation of Middle Tennessee ensures that one gift can impact the widest range of charitable needs in times of disaster.

In the course of rebuilding lives disrupted by disaster, it is impossible to know just what the needs will be. Response to disaster is dictated by the size, scope and circumstance.

This fund will be used strategically to address needs as they emerge and evolve. Needs will arise and change, and The Metro Nashville Disaster Response Fund is designed to remain flexible in response to those changing needs.

The Fund is a long-term vehicle that will continue to support the people of Nashville now and in the months ahead. The Community Foundation will focus the fund's resources on getting help for all nonprofits and/or government agencies serving victims of the flood, and will continue to serve as the central repository for giving at the time of disaster.

The Community Foundation foresees significant unmet needs in this disaster spanning food security issues, legal issues, sheltering, supplies of all kinds, mental health counseling, etc. We are poised to work closely with community leaders to identify the greatest needs and support them prudently.

We will work closely with the city's long-term recovery committee, which will include case management and support services for those affected by the flood.
